Live smart, live easy

Welcome to Collett's Corner – a new residential development that's about to redefine the way we live.

Inspired by the beauty of Lyttelton and its backdrop, Collett's Corner could not exist anywhere else. Location is central to the architectural concept with every element inspired by its environment. Just as it draws from its surroundings, Collett's Corner also gives back. This exclusive residence is set to become one of Lyttelton's iconic buildings and a place where community comes together.

At the heart of this development is a focus on wellbeing, promoting a healthy outlook for mind and body and offering shared spaces for rest, relaxation, interaction and connection.

Feel on top of the world with a communal rooftop terrace for residents and guests, where you can relax or entertain with panoramic views across the harbour and Port Hills.

Collett's Corner is a place where people can live independently as well as know their neighbours. Compact yet beautifully designed, each apartment offers everything you need and nothing you don't, in the heart of Lyttelton.

Your options include: studio, one or two bedroom apartments.

Wellbeing at heart

Collett's Corner is made up of four connected buildings linked at each level. Plentiful communal design elements include a courtyard, laneways, walkways and rooftop deck, bringing both spaces and people together.

Everyone's Welcome

At ground level you'll find a community concierge desk and public courtyard where members of the community are invited to meet, gather and strengthen their relationships.

Shared Car Programme

The lower level also includes parking for five shared vehicles. Let's move towards the future - a greener, more sustainable future, together. As an example - 'Zilch', a local car share programme.

Retail

Colour palette

Exterior Colours

The colour of Collett's Corner is inspired by the sea and volcanic rock from the surrounding environment. The facade will have a range of colours picking up on the various shades of blue/green of the sea.

Exterior cladding Kingspan powder coated aluminium. Each building has a different pattern, while the colour palette remains consistent.

The railings, window frames and detailing will pick up on the rusty red/brown colours of the volcanic rock that make up the Banks Peninsula.

Nature's prescriptions

Searching for whole body health?

Social prescriptions – non-medical treatments where patients are encouraged to spend time in local nature spaces – based on hundreds of studies showing the endless benefits to people's psychological well-being and increased social engagement. Within a 5 minute walk, residents of Collett's Corner can be at the waterfront or at the start of one of many walking tracks.

A Blue Prescription

The power of water has been known since ancient times. If you do have access to blue space, it can make you happier, reduce your stress levels, improve your quality of life and make you more sociable and altruistic, intuitively being close to water can induce feelings of calm. People tend to be more physically active in environments where there is access to water, and you're more likely to meet people there, either on an impromptu basis or for organised activities.

Researchers think that the soft visual stimuli of water – the patterns of light falling on it – holds our attention without any conscious effort and allows recovery from cognitive fatigue, providing scope for reflection. This idea, called Attention Restoration Theory, argues that fascination in the natural environment – in this context, the curiosity and wonder that water sparks – is a critical environmental cue in the process of psychological restoration.

Targeting health problems via blue prescriptions is not a new one. Sea bathing and the fresh sea air was prescribed by doctors in the 19th century to treat a range of health concerns. Recent studies where blue care interventions, such as a beach activity, swimming, sailing, fishing or canoeing, were used to treat individuals with specific mental health problems – including PTSD, addiction and depression – and people with physical disabilities found that blue care interventions delivered direct benefits for health, especially mental health and social well-being.

A Green Prescription

Recent studies suggest that regular exposure to green space delivers long-lasting and deep impacts to both physical and mental health along with significant social benefits. People living with higher levels of green space exposure are more likely to report good overall health according to data from 20 countries including the UK, the US, Spain, France, Germany, Australia and Japan. Green space was defined as open, undeveloped land with natural vegetation, which included urban parks. Experts analysed how the health of people with little access to green spaces compared to that of people with the highest amounts of exposure.

Key findings: reduced risk of type II diabetes, cardiovascular disease, premature death and increased sleep duration. One of the really interesting things researchers found is that exposure to greenspace significantly reduces people's levels of salivary cortisol a physiological marker of stress.

Study co-author Prof Andy Jones, from UEA, said: "We often reach for medication when we're unwell but exposure to health-promoting environments is increasingly recognised as both preventing and helping treat disease. Our study shows that the size of these benefits can be enough to have a meaningful clinical impact."

Source: A systematic review and meta-analysis of greenspace exposure and health outcomes' is published in the journal Environmental Research on 6 July 2019.

What is co-living?

A new kind of living – co-living is an innovative way of living for people who value community.

The central idea behind co-living is to live with purpose by building an ecosystem of support and collaboration. For Collett's Corner, co-living means people will live separately in their own apartments, but enjoy some shared facilities such as laundry and the roof-top terrace. These shared facilities mean residents will have a lower ecological footprint as well as more opportunities to meet and engage with other like-minded people.

We have designed our residential apartments on co-living principles because at its core, Collett's Corner is a place of connection and community. We aim to create a more equitable and sustainable future, one that supports wellbeing, strengthens relationships and respects our environment.

While an apartment at Collett's Corner will provide more opportunities for meeting people and growing connections, there is no requirement to live communally.

Ōhinehou Lyttelton

Whakaraupō/Lyttelton Harbour is a taonga (treasure) to those who live, work and play in its waters, on its beaches and along its ridges.

Te Wai Pounamu the South Island of Aoteroa New Zealand is seen by Ngāti Wheke as Te Waka o Aoraki. Whakaraupō - and the wider Banks Peninsula - was created as Tūterakiwhānoa (Aoraki's relation who came in search of him and his brothers) raked rubble from their crashed waka into a heap to clear what is now the Canterbury Plains. Generations later the harbour was given its name of Whakaraupō - the reed-filled harbour - by the great explorer Tamatea-PōkaiWhenua. The name Ōhinehou or Lyttelton refers to a young girl (hine) who longed to be with the Patupaiarehe (fairies) who loved the harbour.

Whakaraupō was first settled by Waitaha and Ngāti Māmoë, with Ngāi Tahu assuming mana whenua of the area in the 18th century through both conquest and intermarriage. The earliest Pākehā in and around Banks Peninsula were whalers, sealers and flax traders, with the most significant contact between Māori and European beginning with the whalers in the 1830's. In the 1840's Pākehā settlers arrived in Whakaraupō Harbour to establish communities and lease land for farms. In 1849 the Port Cooper Deed was signed and Pākehā settlement expanded throughout the harbour. In 1850 the Canterbury Associations First Four Ships landed in what is now Lyttelton, with their passengers climbing up the Bridle Path over the Port Hills to establish the settlement of Christchurch.

A plaque to honour Collett's Corner was laid in 2016, on the 105th anniversary of the opening of Collett's Chemist.

Collett's history

In 1911 Collett's Chemist opened on the corner of London Street and Oxford Streets in Lyttelton. With a nod to its rich past, the building has retained the name Collett's Corner.

To many local people, Collett's Corner is part of Lyttelton's heritage. Although looking very different now, it is a special place for the Lyttelton community and a fitting tribute to the Collett family.

David Collett qualified as a pharmacist in 1908 and opened the chemist shop, concocting many of his own remedies at the pharmacy - Collett's Cough elixir being a fine example.

One of his sons, JB "Bruce" Collett, qualified as a pharmacist in 1944 and joined the business before taking over in 1949. In 1954 the original building was demolished and a new structure was erected on the site which included the chemist shop on the corner and three other shops. Bruce retired in 1990 as a pharmacist and also sold the pharmacy.

Bruce Collett along with his brothers and sisters and his own children were all born in Lyttelton and were educated at the Lyttelton Main School. Bruce became Mayor of Lyttelton in 1958 which is a position he held for 18 years. Bruce passed away at the age of 92 in 2012 and Barbara passed away at 2014. Their children and grandchildren are still living in Canterbury.

Given the history, it seems fitting that we are now creating a wellbeing centre for whole body health on the original Collett's Corner site.

Shared journey

Over 350 everyday people came together last year to make Collett's Corner New Zealand's first community minded, equity crowdfunded commercial property development.

One of the key purposes of Collett's Corner is to own things together. It's essential to know that we are not crowdfunding because we want the general public to pay for a private enterprise. Quite the opposite. We are offering shares – sourcing crowd ownership – so that many people from all walks of life can own this building and benefit from its investment returns.

We are working together to build the buildings we want in our towns and cities, and then sharing the return they generate widely.

When you participate, you are not giving your money away. You're buying shares in a building that will contribute both economically and socially to the community it sits within. Your share ownership remains with you until you choose to sell or gift them to someone else.

Collett's Corner is more than a building. It's a way to distribute wealth more fairly and begin to close the inequality gap that divides our society. So instead of a few people making a lot, many people can make a little. We are crowdfunding so that people like you can be part of the change.

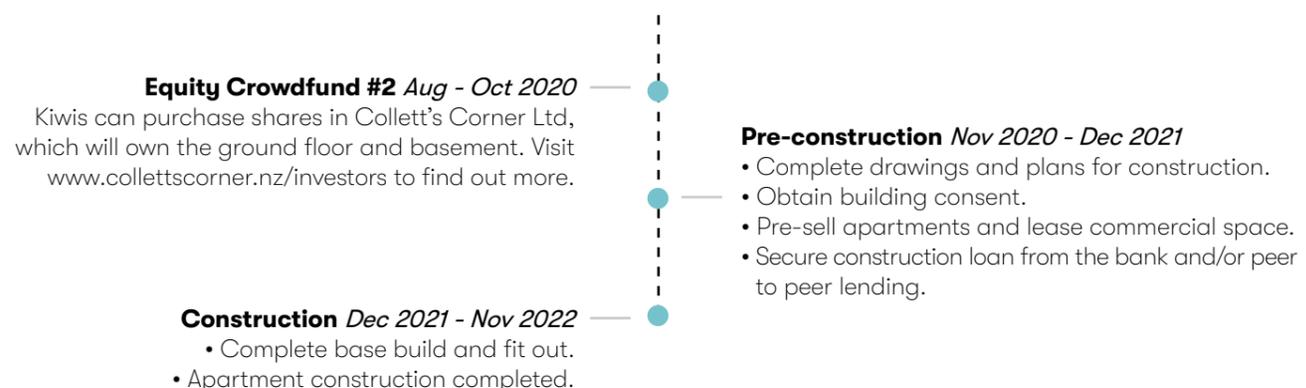

The equity crowdfunding campaign closes on 29 October 2020. After that you can register your interest to purchase shares, should other shareholders consider selling theirs.
